NEADA

The National Energy Assistance Directors' Association (NEADA) represents the state directors of the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP). NEADA was formed in 1983 to support states in the development of LIHEAP policies to provide quality assistance to eligible households.

NEADA accomplishes its goals through coordinating and cooperating in the collection and dissemination of information, proposing energy policy, providing program administrative advice, analyzing programs and benefits among public and private institutions, and enhancing each state's capabilities and responsibilities in the administration and delivery of energy assistance.

NEADA has completed two national surveys of LIHEAP recipients, for example, interviewing more than 1,100 recipients in its most recent study. In addition, NEADA conducts ongoing surveys of program applications, recipients, arrearages and shutoffs throughout the program year. Copies of all NEADA reports and surveys can be downloaded from its website: www.neada.org.

NFFN

The National Fuel Funds Network (NFFN) is the association of charitable fuel funds. NFFN's main mission is to increase the resources available to meet the energy needs of people with low income. NFFN opens its Annual Conference to all organizations and individuals concerned with low-income energy assistance. The Network's membership encompasses private fuel funds, also called energy banks or utility assistance funds; utilities; community action and social service agencies; government and Tribal programs; and private citizens.

NFFN programs include: the Annual Conference in which participants receive state-of-the-art training and continuing education; technical assistance to members; Washington Action Day for LIHEAP each winter; a website – www.nationalfuel funds.org; and the quarterly National Energy Assistance Report. The Network's Energy Safety Net Project reports on and stimulates best practices and fundraising. NFFN's Energy Safety Net Toolkit provides utilities, nonprofits and governments with tools to build new programs and collaborations.

The National Fuel Funds Network and its members advocate vigorously for a strong LIHEAP and for the needs of people with low income in other energy-related federal policymaking. The Network also promotes the creation and improvement of fuel funds and helps build statewide energy assistance coalitions. Since NFFN's founding in 1984, membership has grown to over 300 organizations. Member organizations may apply for financial assistance to participate in the Annual Conference. For more information and to join NFFN, visit www.nationalfuel funds.org.

NLIEC

Founded in 1986, The National Low Income Energy Consortium (NLIEC) operates the largest and most diverse low-income energy conference in North America. NLIEC brings together organizations and individuals from the public, private, and nonprofit sectors for the common purpose of increasing awareness of and eliminating residential energy hardships and crises faced by low-income consumers.

NLIEC's conference provides timely and accurate information you can take home and apply in your everyday work. It provides you with invaluable networking opportunities and facilitates connections with resources that you will call upon for years to come. If your work involves low-income consumers, energy legislation, program or service delivery, community organizing, social welfare or housing, you cannot afford to miss this important and informative gathering.

In addition to conducting the annual National Low Income Energy Conference, NLIEC also maintains a website – www.nliec.org – that includes information about the Consortium, our conference and an online resource center containing new stories and releases, editorials and published commentaries on energy issues. In addition, NLIEC publishes a monthly electronic newsletter available free to all stakeholders; provides speakers for local and regional energy summits; and produces the quarterly Journal of Energy Assistance (www.energyassistancejournal.org). The Journal is an online publication containing research, evidence-based articles, case studies and examples of best practices that is intended to be a relevant, valuable, appropriate and accurate resource for stakeholders in the energy-assistance community.

Joint Statement

The National Energy Assistance Directors' Association (NEADA), National Fuel Funds Network (NFFN) and National Low Income Energy Consortium (NLIEC) partner annually to provide the Joint Low Income Energy Conferences. Each year, people interested in energy-assistance issues gather to share experiences, common problems and, most importantly, solutions and successes. At this unique event, attendees receive the latest updates from local, regional and national experts regarding programs and policies to help low-income consumers meet their energy needs.

NEADA, NFFN and NLIEC are holding their annual conferences and meetings in Nashville, TN, on June 3-7, 2007. The National Energy Assistance Directors' Annual Meeting and the National Fuel Funds Network's 23rd Annual Conference run concurrently, beginning at noon on Sunday and running through Monday. The NLIEC's 21st Annual National Low Income Energy Conference opens with the Bridges Reception for all Joint Conferences attendees on Monday evening, and continues with workshops and general sessions through midday Thursday.

No one needs to remind you how great the challenges are when serving clients and customers in an era of ever-diminishing resources and wildly fluctuating prices. While many state governments stepped up to provide additional funding for the 2005-2006 heating season, states still have limited abilities to supplement federal programs amid their own, challenging budget circumstances. That is why the Joint Conferences are as important, if not more important, than ever. Neither the federal government nor state governments, the utility sector nor the nonprofit sector alone can solve the problem of unaffordable energy for low-income customers. It takes innovative ideas and collaborative partnerships to ensure energy security for all.

The Joint Low Income Energy Conferences are exactly where you need to be for five intense and exciting days. Together, we will be exploring model programs, effective policies and practices, innovative collaborations, and new information and resources. This is your time to learn and have fun. You will leave the conferences with new connections, resources, and knowledge – ready to successfully take on the challenges in your own community.

We know that travel is costly, budgets are tight, and opportunities to attend conferences and trainings are limited. Here is a valuable solution: the opportunity to attend multiple events with just one trip. And we make it simple. You register just once for the conferences you want to attend, using the Joint Conferences registration form in this brochure or our joint, online registration process. One form, one payment in a "one-stop-shopping" approach. We expect a large number of attendees, so please register early to guarantee your participation! We look forward to seeing you in June.

Join Us in Nashville, Tennessee for the 2007 Joint Low Income Energy Conferences

When people think of Nashville, the words that most often come to mind are "Music City." While most often associated with country music, Nashville's musical heritage encompasses much more: country, blues, jazz, swing, rock, gospel, contemporary Christian and classical. From the Grand Ole Opry to the Nashville Symphony, the Music City has it all.

But beyond the music venues, Nashville boasts over 40 different attractions from the Country Music Hall of Fame and Museum to President Andrew Jackson's home, The Hermitage, from the celebrated Frist Center for the Visual Arts to the Cheekwood Botanical Garden & Museum of Art, and from Nashville's Athena Parthenos (the tallest indoor sculpture in the Western world) to the thoroughbred racing heritage of Belle Meade Plantation.

Without a doubt, Nashville is a city you're certain to enjoy!
